

Compulsory health insurance in Switzerland

Information on the exemption from compulsory health insurance in Switzerland

In principle, any person who stays in Switzerland (with the exception of tourists) and/or is in gainful employment is required to have health insurance in Switzerland. A person is required within three months of the start of the obligation to be insured (from taking up residence or starting a gainful economic activity in Switzerland) to take out basic compulsory insurance with a Swiss health insurance company under the Health Insurance Act (HIA) with retrospective effect from the date on which the obligation to be insured in Switzerland arose. Any delay in taking out basic compulsory insurance under HIA may lead to a surcharge being added to the premium and may mean that you are uninsured for a period. For further information, consult our brochure "Compulsory health insurance in Switzerland".

Depending on which country they live in, family members resident in an EU state who are not in gainful employment must also be insured in Switzerland. Please read the relevant factsheet "Information for family members not in gainful employment who are resident in an EU/EFTA state".

1. Who is exempt from compulsory health insurance in Switzerland?

An exemption from the obligation to have health insurance is possible if you belong to a specific group of persons (overview on page 2) and your current health insurance provides cover for treatment in Switzerland that meets the Swiss requirements (equivalent insurance cover).

2. What do you have to do if you want to obtain an exemption from the obligation to be insured?

You must apply to us in writing for an exemption from the obligation to have health insurance in Switzerland¹ (application for an exemption).

Please send your application for an exemption to our office with all the required documents as quickly as possible. In this way, we can tell you as soon as possible whether you are exempt from the obligation to have health insurance in Switzerland or whether you must take out basic compulsory insurance under HIA with a Swiss health insurance company. Special deadlines apply to certain groups of persons².

3. What do you have to do if you are not eligible for an exemption from the obligation to have health insurance?

In this case you must take out basic compulsory insurance under HIA with a Swiss health insurance company within three months from the date on which the obligation to have health insurance in Switzerland arose. Any delay in taking out basic compulsory insurance may lead to a surcharge being added to the premium and may mean that you are uninsured for a period.

For further information on your obligation to have health insurance, consult our brochure "Compulsory health insurance in Switzerland".

¹ Retired persons must send their application for an exemption to the Gemeinsame Einrichtung KVG (Gibelinstrasse 25, 4503 Solothurn; info@kvg.org; 032 625 30 30)

² Special deadlines apply to cross-border commuters and to person entitled to privileges under international law. See the overview on the next page.

4. Overview of the groups of persons that may apply for an exemption from the obligation to have health insurance in Switzerland

- Family members: spouses and children under the age of 18 or young adults under the age of 25 but still in full-time education
- Equivalent insurance cover: the foreign health insurance company must offer the same insurance cover as compulsory basic insurance from a Swiss health insurance company
- Private health insurance companies must confirm on our forms that they offer equivalent insurance cover in Switzerland. Separate confirmations or excerpts from insurance policies are not accepted

5. Why is having private or foreign health insurance not enough to be exempted from the Swiss obligation to be insured?

The statutory obligation to be insured is intended to ensure not only that everyone has insurance cover but also to create solidarity between healthy and sick people, the young and the elderly, and men and women. Private and foreign insurance companies make no contribution to this solidarity.
